

Homework Assignment 1

Question about The two cultures, C.P. Snow:

Even if the culture should build bridges to each other, should the cultures be divided equally?

Question about The two cultures, C.P. Snow:

I like it that Snow does not rail against religion, but ignorance, for I am not religious myself. It is not by disrespecting a group you can give them insight. However, by speaking about their fundamentals and changing it, you can build these 'bridges'. Until we are willing to expect the world the way it is, we are unlikely to address the challenges in this world.

Question about What Is This Thing Called Science? Alan Chalmers:

Can we still interpret scientific results if the result can not be explained with common knowledge?

Insight about What Is This Thing Called Science? Alan Chalmers:

Their background can influence people's perspective. This is not just for the observee but also for the observer itself. This means that the facts required and the knowledge, are fallible and subject to correction or interpreted differently.
